

ABSTRACT

A network system design system including a first computing device, a second computing device, and an executing program. The second computing device is communicably coupled to the first computing device. The executing program is running on the overall computing device comprising the first computing device and the second computing device. Therein the executing program is adapted to configure a network system.